

Lewis Spitz & Edward M Kiely Symposium

with the

78th Simpson-Smith Memorial Lecture

09:30 – 09:45	Welcome and opening remarks - Simon Blackburn
Debate: Are we training the right people? - Moderator: Dhanya Mullassery
09:45 – 10:00	The current system of selection into training - Hetal Patel
10:00 – 10:15	Our existing system of selection is not fit for purpose - Sarah Almond
10:15 – 10:30	Our existing system of selection is fit for purpose - Sean Marven
Debate: Is our training fit for purpose? - Moderator: Stefano Giuliani
10:30 – 10:45	The existing pathway of training - Hany Gabra
10:45 – 11:00	Trainees are spending time doing the wrong things - Eva Sorensen
11:00 – 11:15	Trainees are doing the right things - our system works - Shabnam Parkar
11:15 – 11:45	Coffee break
Subspecialist procedures and the training system - Moderator: Sonia Basson
11:45 – 12:00	Subspecialist procedures should be learned after CCT - Suren Arul
12:00 – 12:15	Subspecialist procedures should be learned by trainees before CCT - Kathryn Ford
Formal research in paediatric surgical training - Moderator: Simon Eaton
12:15 – 12:45	All paediatric surgical trainees should be spending time doing formal research - Stavros Loukogeorgakis
12:45 – 13:00	Formal research time is for the few, most people don't need it - Ceri Jones
13:00 – 14:00	Lunch break
14:00 – 14:30	Learning, losing and re-learning: how simulation can support skill retention during gaps in training - Pasquale Berlingieri & Marta de Andrés Crespo
14:30 – 15:00	Driving change: the impact of low-cost simulation-based educational innovations in resource-limited settings - Ram Nataraja
15:00 – 15:30	The global deterioration in child health outcomes: how might the medical profession respond? - Camilla Kingdon
15:30 – 16:00	Coffee break
16:00 – 16:30	The human behind the surgeon: enhancing performance and wellbeing - Lilli Cooper
16:30 – 17:00	The limitations of shape of training - Liam McCarthy
17:00 – 18:00	Introduction – Paolo De Coppi 78 th Simpson-Smith Memorial Lecture: - Joe Curry